

The Bartlett Museum is a member of the American Association of Museums (AAM), New England Museum Association (NEMA), Cultural Alliance of the Lower Merrimack Valley (CALM Valley) and Amesbury's Treasures.

The two-room Italianate style "Ferry School" was built in 1870. The name was later changed to the "Bartlett School" in 1922 in honor of the Amesbury-born Josiah Bartlett, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. The two rooms were divided to create four, and from the time to its closing in 1968, the school housed various combinations of grades one through five.

The museum was founded in 1968 as part of the celebration for the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Town of Amesbury.

The Museum's permanent collection includes: prehistoric and Native American artifacts; memorabilia from Colonial, Federal and Victorian periods; room settings of an early kitchen and a Victorian parlor with life-size figures dressed in period costumes; a natural history room featuring a large collection of birds, some of which are extinct, and fossils, minerals and shells from the area; an original schoolroom with early desks gathered from local schools, children's games and toys; local maps, a carriage house and Amesbury history.

Membership is open to adult men and women from any town or state. We welcome history buffs, collectors, genealogists and curiosity seekers.

The Bartlett Museum is a member of the American Association of Museums (AAM), New England Museum Association (NEMA), Cultural Alliance of the Lower Merrimack Valley (CALM Valley) and Amesbury's Treasures.

The two-room Italianate style "Ferry School" was built in 1870. The name was later changed to the "Bartlett School" in 1922 in honor of the Amesbury-born Josiah Bartlett, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. The two rooms were divided to create four, and from the time to its closing in 1968, the school housed various combinations of grades one through five.

The museum was founded in 1968 as part of the celebration for the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Town of Amesbury.

The Museum's permanent collection includes: prehistoric and Native American artifacts; memorabilia from Colonial, Federal and Victorian periods; room settings of an early kitchen and a Victorian parlor with life-size figures dressed in period costumes; a natural history room featuring a large collection of birds, some of which are extinct, and fossils, minerals and shells from the area; an original schoolroom with early desks gathered from local schools, children's games and toys; local maps, a carriage house and Amesbury history.

Membership is open to adult men and women from any town or state. We welcome history buffs, collectors, genealogists and curiosity seekers.

The Bartlett Museum is a member of the American Association of Museums (AAM), New England Museum Association (NEMA), Cultural Alliance of the Lower Merrimack Valley (CALM Valley) and Amesbury's Treasures.

The two-room Italianate style "Ferry School" was built in 1870. The name was later changed to the "Bartlett School" in 1922 in honor of the Amesbury-born Josiah Bartlett, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. The two rooms were divided to create four, and from the time to its closing in 1968, the school housed various combinations of grades one through five.

The museum was founded in 1968 as part of the celebration for the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Town of Amesbury.

The Museum's permanent collection includes: prehistoric and Native American artifacts; memorabilia from Colonial, Federal and Victorian periods; room settings of an early kitchen and a Victorian parlor with life-size figures dressed in period costumes; a natural history room featuring a large collection of birds, some of which are extinct, and fossils, minerals and shells from the area; an original schoolroom with early desks gathered from local schools, children's games and toys; local maps, a carriage house and Amesbury history.

Membership is open to adult men and women from any town or state. We welcome history buffs, collectors, genealogists and curiosity seekers.